ARMED CITIZENS

An elderly couple in Abbottstown, PA were sitting in their living room Dec. 22, 2021 when a half-naked man entered the home and began punching the male homeowner. The husband yelled for his wife to get their revolver in their bedroom, but the intruder followed her as well. The husband was able to retrieve his gun during the tussle and shot the attacker multiple times.

The home-owner's both sustained injuries from the attack; the intruder died at the scene. Police said they had received reports of a man in the area behaving erratically, trying to enter homes and banging on cars in traffic, which they believed to be this suspect. He was apparently fully clothed during the other reported incidents but removed all but his shirt for unknown reasons before entering the elderly couple's home.
